

This Langley home was built in stages. On the left is a one-story cottage that was used initially for weekends and holidays. The two-story main house is on the right and was built with a see-through sunroom/entry to connect to the cottage. In the foreground right is a dog-trot garden storage building.

A detached two-car garage and workshop is behind this photo and sheilds the house from the road.

This is the seaward side of the home. It looks over a bluff down into the Langley harbor.